Tel Dor Field School

The Tel Dor Field School at the University of Washington is a one-of-a-kind program that instructs its students in modern archaeological technique, brings these students into the field as valued members of an international archaeological team, and provides an experience that will last a lifetime. Participants in the field school, working and studying daily with students and scholars from Israel and around the world, are moved from the role of student to that of archaeologist and fellow researcher. Each day on the Tel we uncover the past, learn more about the present, and add forever to our knowledge of the ancient Mediterranean and Near East.
